September 2023 Newsletter

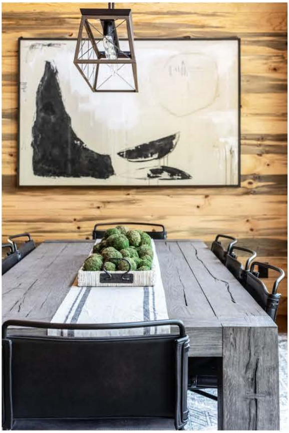
Hello, Friend!

In September's edition of The Z & Co. Monthly, we're taking you on a scenic trip to one of our favorite wilderness retreat destinations: The Blue Ridge Mountains!

Explore one of our newest mountain projects where the base materials are just as stunning as the furniture and decor. Plus, learn how to achieve a balance between rustic and modern design, and discover our best decorating tips for styling your dining room table and windows with ease!

Featured Project

Project Aska Retreat | Atlanta, GA



Z & Co. was hired to furnish, decorate, and style this three-level property, inside and out. This home was designed to incorporate durable, cleanable materials, mountain modern aesthetics, and to exude a warm, inviting vibe...

Antique and vintage furniture adds character to any space and is also better for the planet. The detailed artistry of furniture from the past harmonizes beautifully with the clean simplicity of modern designs. These treasures, whether restored, refurbished, or repurposed, lend themselves best to curated, traditional, and eclectic design tastes and are a great option for those seeking sustainable and high-quality pieces.

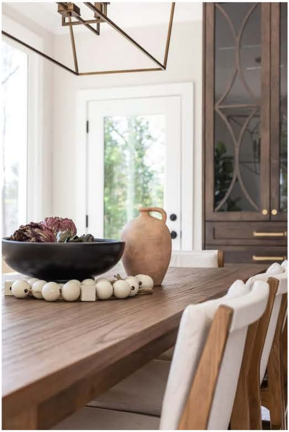
Insider Tips



When selecting a centerpiece for your table, consider a shape that contrasts with the table itself. For rectangular tables, opt for a round bowl, vase, or large ball as the focal piece. The juxtaposition will add visual intrigue and balance to your setup. Then, build complementary pieces of various shapes, textures, and colors around it, such as votive candles, garlands, fruit, and greenery. Creating a centerpiece is an art of harmony. It's complete when it captures attention without overpowering the table’s negative space.

Q&A: How to decide between drapery panels, shades, or both?

A: Drapery panels can be a default in just about any situation to soften and finish a room. Shades can be used in situations where panels would disturb or impede the flow of traffic. They are also great for windows needing privacy that are too wide and would require an unwanted excess of drapery fabric. In that case, shades can accompany panels for a layering effect that is both aesthetically pleasing and functional. Opt for automatic shades for windows located in hard to reach areas.
